

ShareMethods Announces New World Language Capabilities

South Orange, NJ - Nov 12, 2012 -- ShareMethods is proud to announce that its new release contains extensive new foreign language support. Foreign languages enhance ShareMethods' appeal to non-English speaking markets.

In an unusual feature in the software industry, customers can easily translate the user interface into any language by simply editing a file of menu and button tags. Thus a customer does not need to depend on the software vendor to create a specific language translation. Individual users may select to see their interface in any available translation.

In addition to the "any language" feature, ShareMethods offers default translations for major languages. Initially, the languages supported are Spanish, French, and Russian, with others to be offered in the future.

The new linguistic features complement existing ShareMethods features that allow an organization to name folders and documents in any language, with non-Latin character and double-byte character sets supported. The full-text search feature also automatically supports searching in any language in which customer documents are written.
